Re: Attorney-Client Privilege

Dear Mr. Pickholz:

This firm represents Beverage Creations, Inc. ("BCI"). We have received notice that the Securities and Exchange Commission intends to take the deposition of your client, Stephen Czarnik, Esq., at 10:30 a.m. on March 27, 2008 in connection with a civil law suit it filed in the Northern District of Texas.

Mr. Czarnik is in possession of certain information that he gained as result of his attorney-client relationship with BCI, including attorney-client communications and attorney work product that is privileged and may not be disclosed by Mr. Czarnik. The attorney-client communication privilege and work product immunity doctrine belong to BCI. You have no authority whatsoever to waive either and you are not authorized to testify about BCI privileged matters, except as to the following topics

1. BCI has agreed to waive all attorney-client communications and work product protections having to do with the issuance of any and all convertible notes by BCI to Bellatalia LP, Thomas Wade Investments and Wynn Industries, Inc. (hereinafter the "Note Holders").

2. BCI has agreed to waive all attorney-client communications and work product protections having to do with the conversion by the Note Holders debts into equity in BCI and the issuance and transfer of the stock by BCI, including the subscription agreements executed by the converting Note Holders.

3. BCI has agreed to waive all attorney-client communications and work product protections having to do with the opinion of counsel that you gave regarding registration and/or exemption from registration of the shares issued to the Note Holders after the conversion of the notes.
